DRUNKEN BEGGAR ARRESTED.

A tall man calling himself Steel was arrested last night for drunkenness. He has been a beggar in the streets off and on for three months and has claimed matriculation in various colleges. He also says he has served the Associated Press at Manila. He made two un-der-standable calls at the Advertiser office yesterday, asking for money, and when told that if he didn't stay away he would find himself in the cooler, he replied that it didn't matter as he had been in all the best of them. A bicycle policeman was sent for and the fellow, who is a professional bilk, was gathered in. Steel has a good address and several people in town have helped him, but he prefers beggary to work. Possibly three months on the stonepile would give him a taste for industry.

Heinz History

A German woman, locally famous for her preserves, jellies and pickles, began peddling them around the town.

Her sons helped her. They grew up with the business. Soon the demand for their goods grew among the small merchants, and they established a manufacturing house, but took good care to keep in their goods the OLD HOME-MADE QUALITY.

There lies the secret of their success; the best housewife cannot improve upon the HEINZ VARIETIES, nor can she make them as cheaply as she can buy them at her grocer's.
